

On One Winter Day is a 30 minute film written and directed by Thomas Brown and produced by OAPT in 2008. It was made primarily to assist in training school bus drivers, counselors and students about the dangers of bullying on the school bus and about stressing the importance of the danger zone.

In addition, Tears on The Highway is a Thomas Brown Film that addresses Bullying on the school bus. This film is also an excellent training tool.

Both films are targeted to students from 3rd through 7th grade.
